This rare Ferrari 12-cylinder sports coupé was sold in 1966 via Modern Classic in Reno, Nevada, USA, and delivered to its first owner in California in 1967. The owner kept the vehicle for only one year. The second owner kept the Ferrari for over 30 years. The vehicle was completely restored for US$100,000. In the process, the vehicle was repainted from dark gray to black. The beautiful Ferrari was then exported to the Netherlands. Here it remained in the possession of Alex von Mozer for several years. A Dutch trade magazine wrote a nice article about this Ferrari with the excellent headline: "The black sheep." In 2001, the 330 GT was sold to its third owner in Bonn, who drove and maintained it until the end of 2006. The current owner has enjoyed the beautiful coupé for the last 19 years. Since 1993, the car has been driven just under 8,000 miles (13,000 km). There are several valuation reports that attest to the Ferrari's above-average condition (2+). Furthermore, several invoices from specialist workshops prove that investments have been made in the vehicle's technology on a regular basis. The Ferrari is being sold with a current MOT certificate and H license plate.
