The first Porsche GT3 was introduced in May 1999 as the successor to the Porsche 993 Carrera RS. It was the first Porsche 911 sports model equipped with a water-cooled naturally aspirated engine. Porsche adopted the GT3 designation from the racing class in which the motorsport version of the GT3 competed. The base price at launch was 179,500 DM for the 1999 model year and 181,295 DM for the 2000 model year. Originally, 1,350 units were planned, 685 of which were intended for the German market. However, due to strong demand, a total of 1,868 units were produced.

First delivered through the Porsche Center Essen, this beautiful GT3 was registered in Oldenburg on January 20, 2000. During the first few years, it was serviced exclusively at the Porsche Center Bremen, and subsequently at the Porsche Centers in Stuttgart and Wuppertal—by the second and third owners. The last inspection was performed at the end of 2025 by the current owner, just 400 kilometers ago. Extras: Higher-capacity battery, genuine leather sports seats, green-tinted windshield, air conditioning, etc.
